Piano

The first system of musical notation consists of a five-line staff with a treble clef. The melody is represented by various colored shapes: black circles, yellow circles, green circles, and red triangles. Below the staff, there are brown circles and a green square, which are part of the figure-note design.

The second system of musical notation continues the melody with black circles, yellow circles, green circles, and brown triangles. A black bar with the word "FINE" is present in the sixth measure. Below the staff, there are brown circles and a green square.

The third system of musical notation features yellow circles, black circles, blue circles, green circles, and red triangles. A black bar is present in the sixth measure. Below the staff, there are brown circles and a grey circle.

The fourth system of musical notation includes a red triangle, green circles, yellow circles, black circles, and a blue circle with an arrow. Below the staff, there is a brown circle.
